Kris

See Mark's response below on service at the jail. I will pass along any additional follow-up or ideas he gets from the other contact he mentions.

Thanks,

Scott

I just spoke with a shift commander (captain) who said that professionals (attorneys/US Marshalls) can come in during regular business (day) hours and request to meet with an inmate. They will be taken to an attorney booth and they can then pass documents through the slot to the inmate. If they need a face-to-face, they will need to contact "inmate services" to schedule a meeting with Pillon. Over the years I've done it both ways. There may be significant waiting time if they show up and ask for Pillon to be brought out. If he's recalcitrant, or taking meals or medications or whatever, it just takes a while. I also have a call out to our County Services Section attorney. This section advises the Jail on day-to-day operations and they may have another and/or better approach. I'm in a deposition tomorrow, so I'll try to pass on what I hear.

Mark

I spoke with Kris Leefers at EPA today and she was wondering how they might go about serving Mr. Pillon with paperwork while he is in custody. Do you happen to know if the Sheriff would do that since they are kind of in control of him at the moment? If so, do you know who she would need to contact to set that up?

Thanks,
